Summary

This document collection (c. 1622-1745, compiled 1745) pertains to a land dispute over Ilha Verde (Green Island) in Macao between the Society of Jesus and the city authorities, with involvement from Chinese mandarins. The primary historical significance lies in its illumination of the complex interplay between Portuguese colonial administration, Jesuit missionary activities, and Chinese local governance in 17th and 18th century Macao. The compiler, João Alvarez (likely a Jesuit based on contextual clues), aims to refute claims against the Society's ownership of Ilha Verde. The core of the dispute revolves around the Society's acquisition and development of Ilha Verde. Initially acquired circa 1603 under Jesuit Visitor Alessandro Valignano and Rector Valentin Carvalho, the island, then known as "Ilha dos Diabos" (Island of Devils), served as a convalescent retreat. Over time, the Jesuits cultivated the land, built structures, and purchased it from local inhabitants identified as originating from Nami. The document details subsequent conflicts arising from Chinese mandarin attempts to restrict further Jesuit development on the island, particularly in 1622. The text references specific actions such as the erection of a marker by the city and subsequent protests by the Society. The compiler meticulously cites archival sources, including papers from the Secretariat of the Province and His Majesty in the College of Madre de Deus, emphasizing the legality of the Jesuit claim based on purchase and long-term, peaceful possession (approximately 17-18 years by 1745). He refutes counterarguments, citing legal principles, Jesuit constitutions, and the authority of past Jesuit officials. Financial investments made by the Society on Ilha Verde, estimated at 14,000 taels, are also presented as supporting evidence. The document includes transcribed excerpts from a city council meeting held on December 4, 1621, recording discussions about the dispute and the potential demolition of Jesuit buildings on Ilha Verde. This meeting involved city officials, merchants, and the Jesuit Rector. A subsequent protest by the Society and the city's response, mediated by Gabriel de Mello, are also documented. The document's value lies in its detailed account of the dispute, offering insights into land ownership practices, legal arguments, and the dynamics of power between different actors in colonial Macao. The inclusion of primary source excerpts, such as the city council minutes, enhances its historical value. The compiler's clear objective to defend the Jesuit position, while potentially introducing bias, provides a valuable perspective on the Society's perspective on the conflict. The document's fragmented nature and instances of illegibility, however, pose challenges to a complete understanding of the events. This document excerpt appears to be a collection of legal and administrative records related to the Portuguese presence in Macao, China, likely dating from the early 17th century (specifically around 1621-1622 based on mentioned dates). The documents hold significant historical value for understanding the complex relationship between the Portuguese and Chinese authorities during the nascent stages of European colonization in East Asia, particularly regarding land ownership, trade, and legal jurisdiction. This index details information regarding Ilha Verde. It includes a report on Ilha Verde (folio 2), details of its boundary (folio 2), and a record of a settlement in the city for purchasing houses on the island (folio 5). A protest from the company to the city concerning Ilha Verde is recorded (folio 6), along with the method of notification (folio 7). The city's record concerning the possession and improvement of Ilha Verde, including the placement of a plaque on the island, is also documented (folio 8). A decree concerning the registry of Ilha Verde is included (folio 9).

A letter from Father Nicolau Congabada is present (folio 22). Statements from India and Macao regarding Ilha Verde are outlined (folio 10). Information from Ceylon, by Antonio Reite of the Company of Father Emil Jeste, is also included (folio 11), as well as information from Macao (folio 12). A record of the size and dealings related to Ilha Verde in 1683 is present (folios 22, 145, and 23). The annual letter from 1622 from the Procurator concerning Ilha Verde is included (folio 24).

Finally, the index contains royal decrees against the fort on the aforementioned island (folio 25). It also details how in March 1623, Morres Naffrina and Pau Roches, Captain of the aforementioned Mechias, and in April of the same year, patents arrived for the Provincial Procurator of China. However, as it was his duty to close matters, etc., Manuel Dio acted as Provincial Procurator (folio 26).

True accounts of the conflicts that occurred in Macao, concerning Green Island, the Mandarins and the City, and the Priests, commencing in the year 1622.

Derived from papers preserved in the Secretariat of the Province and His Majesty, in the College of Madre de Deus of the Society of Jesus, as they were among my mother's papers designated for transcription. Having located the papers relating to the conflicts, I commissioned the transcription of a portion to demonstrate the error in Her Majesty's understanding, given various specific points and questions raised regarding the matter. This also serves to recall the expenses incurred up to the year 1745, excluding the costs associated with servants and freight on the Island. Macao, 27th June 1745.

I further declare that the Priest and Brother of the Province assert that Green Island also belongs to them. However, they are mistaken, as in 1622, neither the Priest nor the Priests of China, legally, nor the Priests of the College of Macao were present. In 1602, the Mandarins of Japan dispatched Father Manuel Diaz and the Provincial Vicar to oversee the three Residences of Nanjing, Nanchang, and Quanzhou. Father Matte, the Superior of the Masses of China, legally, served as both Visitor and Provincial of Japan. This is documented in the minutes, on pages 16 and 17. Macao, 17th June 1745.

In the year 1623, a treatise was composed concerning rights and the Company of Green Tea. In the Lera of 1603, during Mr. Alexandre Valignans' visitorship of the Company in Macao, and with Mr. Valentin Carvaths as Rector of the College, a suitable place for prayer was sought by the visiting Father. The Father Superior of the Company occasionally desired to withdraw, due to the Chidanty disappearing from time to time, the land being unhealthy, and the house cramped. With some other Fathers, he almost accidentally landed on the island of Enich, which was called Devil's Island. It was, in fact, legally occupied and worked by fugitive slaves and Padroans. Landing there, the Father found the location suitable for his purpose and began clearing a piece of land near the beach.

As time progressed, finding the place more convenient, and with no other location presenting itself, he gradually developed the site. This involved planting tea, constructing some small houses, and cultivating various parts of the island by planting trees. After some time, objections arose from some inhabitants of Xami. These gentlemen complained, and the visiting Father, in turn, sailed with them to Nami to speak with the owners of the land. He reached an agreement with them for a considerable sum of silver, thereby acquiring their rights to the island. Subsequently, they purchased another location for the visiting Father to rest and avoid further expense. Trade on the island continued for two years, more or less, during which they resided there.

With complete tranquility, some Chinese merchants would seek a way to obtain more silver in order to purchase and sell teas. The mandarins were to prevent further construction of houses or the burning of existing ones, which were covered with great silk hangings. They were to show the silk hangings again. It seemed fitting to demonstrate these sentiments against certain mandarins. Having learned of these demonstrations, the aforementioned mandarins were to be punished. Not only were they not to complain, but they were to be doubly punished for speaking against the orders. With this, the priests were to renew those matters without being bothered or hindered, after many years without anyone communicating with them. After some years, the mandarins began speaking again about this matter. They agreed to see the register of entries and departures in this area, navigating by sea to this place to sell goods and to speak about teas, seemingly sending porcelain and rice to the King. After this, there was no further discussion of these matters among the mandarins. Beyond this matter, another account from someone nicknamed “Boveys” states that four years prior, when the city was founded, no one spoke of it, nor did anyone else speak of constructing houses there. Information about the construction of these houses was to be gathered, and upon seeing the mandarins, papers and further information were to be presented regarding the history of the city. This information revealed that valuable white stones had arrived at that location, as was clearly declared. A letter about this was sent to the mandarins of that city. However, as there were doubts about whether these matters had been addressed, orders were given for these mandarins to be arrested and for the aforementioned location to be visited and examined. New houses built upon the foundations of old ones were to be investigated.

Now, concerning the leather trade throughout Nagasaki. It is reported that the Emperor is displeased that the Cafres carry weapons, believing they intend to use them offensively, especially against the Japanese. Furthermore, it is said that Jahissembe and others have determined to provide false information regarding potential dealings with the Cafres, both with Freitas and with the priests. They are said to be continuing the demolition of the leather-tanning houses in Nagasaki.

The mandarins of Nagasaki and this city have been instructed by the Emperor to oversee the demolition of the tanneries. However, as has been reported, with many good reasons, Padre João Rodrigues, on behalf of the Portuguese, has earnestly petitioned against this action before Freitas. The Japanese have spoken with the Emperor about this matter, according to the will of the Emperor and his decision. Initially, he said that he would have the tanneries demolished, and this order was about to be carried out. However, having seen our churches being destroyed, as the two Christian magistrates themselves admitted, and having witnessed the burning and bombardment of this city, and given the authority of those involved in this matter, the Emperor reconsidered.

He then ordered the construction of two chapels in those houses, one dedicated to Our Lady, among other things. After this, Girobica, in the name of the Emperor, presented a petition to the city, and the city magistrates responded with another petition, promising to comply with the Emperor's orders, which they did. They silenced the fair with threats, preventing further ill-speaking. However, a serious incident occurred. The mandarin of Macao, unable to leave the harbour due to an adversary and displeased by the situation, returned. Not finding the desired outcome at the fair, he waited for the Portuguese to enter Canton and, with the help of the Chinese, sought to have the tanneries demolished.

This is a brief summary of the substantial events that have transpired from the beginning of this matter until now.

It should be understood from this that in China, some matters require clarification:

Firstly, those possessing burial rights in China can sell these rights, in whole or in part, at any time and to whomever they wish. This is confirmed by daily experience, as observed during our time there. These rights are not only sold within China but also to foreigners, as we ourselves have purchased them twice. The Moors and Moroccans are involved in these transactions. Interfering with burial sites or their lands, such as by felling trees, is subject to severe penalties.

Secondly, it can be inferred that the owner of the burial plot on Ilha Verde held legitimate ownership and rights to that land, having peacefully possessed it for many years. Thirdly, they could enlarge it and sell it to another, according to their customs.

It should also be stated as certain that Mandarins have the authority to allocate uncultivated lands to whomever they choose for cultivation. These lands are subject to royal taxes. However, these taxes can be waived in the initial years of cultivation as an incentive for land development. Not only can these land taxes be waived, but also other annual royal taxes, as was done for us, foreigners, in the purchase of houses. In this particular case concerning the island, the fathers offered to pay taxes through a friendly Mandarin. However, upon learning that there was no profit to be made, he stated that such a small matter did not warrant his involvement.

Thirdly, it should be understood that in China, Mandarins do not typically revoke orders or undo what others have done, especially... [The text ends abruptly here.]

When members of the same Order commit serious offences necessitating their removal from said Order, unless there is significant discord between them, and if there is significant animosity between them, they should accuse one another to someone in a position of authority within their Order, unless there are others present who might exploit the situation for personal gain due to existing rivalries and jealousies. These often lead to confrontations, which can result in attempts to incriminate one another whenever possible, ostensibly for good governance and the benefit of the people, so as not to appear biased or partisan.

Firstly, it can be argued that the Priest and the Company can rightfully occupy the island, primarily due to agreements made with the original owners of the burial site. These individuals, having supposedly fled to this location in good faith and with legitimate claims, have left no trace that we have yet discovered. Thus, you can transfer the trade of this dominion and the rights to us, the Padres, without any force or coercion, as attested by the King of the Embrevios, the King of Majous Dimas, and also the King of May. The alleged vices of the King of May, for which we have proof, were not relevant. He possessed nothing, nor had any other connection to May than what is gleaned from books, as is well known. That this place is held in good faith without suspicion of deceit is evident. Even if there were no other instances or witnesses, the authority of the Visitor Alexandre Dalquans would suffice, given his religious standing, prudence, and virtue. He would not act or make promises firmly to any party without just cause, nor would he instigate vexatious investigations to inflict injustice upon the Chinese.

Secondly, I was able to initiate proceedings with the Mandarins, allowing them publicly to examine this matter and question the Company, as evidenced by the aforementioned document. There was never any official impediment to our inhabiting and utilising the said island, but only to constructing buildings there. This was permissible unless someone objected, as is customary when significant structures are erected on another's property. This commission is explained more clearly throughout the discourse of this Mandarin, and it was subsequently dissolved, as no official document connects the ownership of this island with Macao, or with any other party, or against it.

Against the will of the Mandarins: once at the market frequented by a Mandarin at this location, the priests of Itha, responding to Girrbaca, stated that D. Pedry did not habitually inflict harm or injustice upon anyone. Goods were purchased from those of Nami in the same place with silver. To this, D. [the quad] wished to divulge the name of the party. The Mandarin was obstructed, and thus, by this order, arduous hunts are established, as stated above, and this matter will never again be raised.

Thirdly, for 17 or 18 years, the Company has held this purchase in good faith from the aforementioned Itha, and clearly, according to common law, to be banished from such possession for ten years among those present in the same proof in order to persevere and remain secure in the said purchase, the more desired.

Fourthly, because the Company incurred many expenses and bore costs in the said Itha, and the same was returned to them from that said place, which expenses and improvements amount to 14,000$: a payment of 14 thousand Jacy, as is affirmed and corresponds with the records of the said place, thereby further confirming the said just possession.

Fifthly, because it is clearly established in the records that the aforementioned D. appreciates the possession of the aforementioned Itha, as is still evident, having the force of law, which, together with possession for so many years, must prevail, even if the opposing party has greater probability, as is evident in legal texts, by right.

Sixthly, following from this right, Itha cannot be removed from the Company's possession, nor its duration.

Firstly, because it is against Canon Law, in chapter 1, which states that anyone in religious office who grants their prebends, benefices, or possessions of the same for life or for a certain time for any reason, necessity, or benefit to someone else is suspended from office.

Secondly, because it is against the Constitutions, part 9, chapter 4, section 7, where, among other things, for which reason also...

Fifthly, it would be detrimental to the College if its property were alienated. This is observed when exceptionally valuable assets of houses or colleges are sold off.

Thirdly, if the College cannot legally vindicate its ownership of the Cedlenas estate for the clear benefit of Salene, many other properties could be alienated. Fourthly, although it is just and proper to defend the College's possessions, there is nevertheless doubt as to whether we are obligated to defend the aforementioned estate through lawsuits, given the considerable expense this would entail. We can neither extend nor cede our rights in this matter, and therefore, when compelled, we are obliged to avail ourselves of the best legal counsel. Both common law and our specific constitutions defend us against such aggressions.

Some might argue to the contrary, citing the legislator's written words in a book belonging to this College. However, there are other, more important considerations. The entry therein is not firmly established, being subject to the administrator's prerogative to alter it at will. However, I do not see how this clause or Vieira's note harms us. Firstly, it grants that the aforementioned estate is indeed an asset. Secondly, it amplifies the fact that the situation is not fixed. This is not due to any dependence on the King or his representative, but rather because we are not obliged to accept it. We have neither the means nor the obligation to investigate the matter further, given its uncertain nature and the lack of clarity regarding its dependence on the King. Fourthly, the same situation applies to other, smaller properties. Although some claim otherwise, none can justly deprive individuals of the possession of their houses and lands.

This is my current understanding of the Itha Verde estate. However, I am prepared to reconsider if presented with better arguments to the contrary.

On the 8th day of March of this present year of 1721, the Judiciary, Aldermen, and Mayor being assembled in council, with Antonio Prez, Ouder, and other officials present, along with the merchants of this city, the Rector, Juro de Comp[anha], and some of the merchants of this city who had been summoned by the Mayor, [the following matter was addressed]: Dory Nepresentante, like the other individuals and head officials of India and this city, was embargoed by the Mayor under threat of losses if the houses recently built near the green tea [warehouse/shop] were further demolished. Laure [likely a surname] stated that he had received [something, context unclear] which was immediately determined by the aforementioned Doctor [likely referring to the Rector]. Due to physical inconveniences, the aforementioned Father Neyrezinho would not agree to demolish the aforementioned King and Dilly Say [likely place names or establishments] and corroborate with the aforementioned Ame yphos. This was stated by Bora Simas Vaz. The identity of yphos is being investigated. He accepted on behalf of this city and the common good of all involved, and to this end, resolved to investigate the Company, the entire King and Dilly Say, and corroborate Cary, Debthe, Madura [likely place names or establishments], walls, and the new house. In the first instance, this Father Rector stated that he would present the matter to the aforementioned Sesed so that the discrepancies could be addressed. It was determined that it was not in the common good of this city to demolish the aforementioned wall by cutting through it. Certain particularly unjust impediments have been brought to my attention in Cautad regarding the Company. These impediments involve the seizure of my houses, goods, and trading posts. There has been a practice, for sixteen years, of falsely claiming, as they say, debts owed to the Mandarin and, under this pretext, seizing goods and property. This seizure would include any merchandise, silver, or capital employed. Finally, in the current year of 1619, to address these prosperous but unfounded claims of debt, it was said that neither in Macao nor elsewhere were there any houses, goods, or materials belonging to me. Furthermore, it was claimed that neither in Macao nor elsewhere were there any goods that would be displayed at the fair, nor any that were not already cleared and free of such claims. All materials pertaining to artillery and other items brought into the aforementioned Macao belong to me, and this fact will be verified.

Should you attempt or execute any action based on the aforementioned claims of debt, which are notoriously false, it could have repercussions at the current fair in Japan, where trade is conducted. It could happen at this fair that certain individuals, for some reason or other, might attempt, through appropriate channels or by any other means, to seize anything in their possession for more than eighteen years, claiming it as their own according to established law. They might consider it natural to see such perfect and valuable goods in Macao, not only without intervening, but even consenting and approving. However, you should not consent, but rather resist and strongly oppose such actions, especially in Macao.

Therefore, should anything occur that might disturb the peace and quiet we enjoy in Macao, be assured that we will not obey any Mandarin orders. We will offer resistance to these and any other injustices that may arise here. Rather, we will uphold all our privileges against all such abuses, whoever the perpetrators may be. Your Lordships should intervene and provide assistance, as we cannot allow these actions to continue, in accordance with our established constitutions and ceremonies. Therefore, you are obliged, at any time and in any situation that may arise, to act in accordance with the regulations of the said fair in Japan. You should arrange and provide the necessary and well-founded assistance, as requested many times by many individuals and repeatedly by ourselves.

Have the inquiries or declarations concerning Matheus been completed? They have been executed in the best possible legal manner and form, with accompanying notes and facts to ensure no omissions are detrimental. I have stated and declared this explicitly within this College of Madre de Deus on May 21st. Gabriel de Mattos.

On May 2nd, Gabriel de Mattos of the Company, Rector of this College of Madre de Deus, received the attached summons and petition, signed on May 21st and [likely Vendémiaire, a month in the French Republican Calendar, though the year is unclear and its inclusion here seems anomalous]. He has requested that the City of Deus officials, on May 2nd, mandate one of the judges to carry out the necessary procedures. The judges, with or without the aforementioned summons, will have the matter formally recorded in the customary manner and will receive [presumably a report or payment - the text is unclear].

Without the requested formality. Macao, 8th of May, 1621. Copies.

In response to the requests presented by Father Gabriel de Mattos, Rector of the College of Madre de Deus in this City of Macao, we affirm that no one in China, according to its laws, is the proprietary owner of even a palm's width of land. Only the [Emperor] is Lord of all the land, particularly in this region where we reside. There exists no charter granting ownership to the Portuguese. Our presence here is tolerated for the sake of trade and commerce between ourselves, the Qing, and their Mandarins. They occasionally issue declarations to this effect. Should they wish us to depart, they will do so as they did some years ago when the Mandarins sent us notifications and requests, to which we partially complied. At that time, there was discontent, or possibly a legal victory [the meaning of "Viadory" is unclear in this context], and this land was not demonstrably ours, offering no grounds for objection.

Therefore, being residents and inhabitants of this City, we declare and affirm the following: We shall govern and administer the necessary matters concerning the people, out of respect for the Reverend Father Richter. Furthermore, concerning the Reverend Father Richter, we declare that this City and its inhabitants will welcome merchants and hold canola fairs, both now and in the future, to the west and beyond. We have been entrusted with the preservation of this trade. Also, by the authority of Dom Ruy, for the great benefit and Exchequer of Portugal, through us, and also within the Kingdom, as many times as necessary, if we are in doubt, we can and should seek counsel where and when appropriate. City Record Concerning the events on Ilha Verde.

On the fourteenth day of March or August, in the chamber of the city of Mombasa, with the Magistrate, Overseer, and City Procurator present at the table, along with Mr. João de Gayene, chiefs, elders, and other important dignitaries, a declaration was made concerning the events on Ilha Verde. It pertains to the Jesuit Fathers residing there with their letters and contracts, specifically concerning Pedro Nas Pother. It is stated that, without the required license, they refused to provide provisions to this city, nor would they permit any trade or dealings with the aforementioned ships.

But without permission for the said individuals to erect more houses in Santa Maria, on the island, and to build and it is from today they are united as they have been until the present, without difficulty in the said town, officials as in the said stone contains, and in case of other matters, you may wish [to consult] De Mello Cabral, Ensign and clerk of this record, written in the year of Our Lord Jesus Christ one thousand seven hundred and twenty-one.

Identical record I, Nuno de Mello Cabral, swear faithfully by the Book of Decrees (where it is recorded on folio 259, which in all and everything I uphold) and forever maintain, can, and declare by my signature, at any and all times as above.

Concerning the evening inspection of the city, following the Company's protest regarding Green Island, to declare the right that the Portuguese hold in the City of Macao.

Reviewing the evening inspection, the City Council approved it, and the Rector of the College of Madre de Deus was requested to address the possession of Green Island, insofar as deceit is clearly and notably evident, which appears necessary to clarify for the good and preservation of the said City.

Resolution Point.

The first point is this, and in these formal words: according to the Law, notorious occupation of the Island determines its rightful owner, who is thus lord of it.

On this point, the deceit is clear and evident, because the Machua, concerning ownership of the lands, are no different from other Pumos, and it is clearly and urgently seen in various places for the public use of some Tribunal and Magistrate of the kingdom, of which they are lords of tribute, or were.

Furthermore, within the fifteen Provinces of China, there are eleven Chados, like Duchies, and true properties, and the governors, and even their sons, upon their death...

On the age of governance, governing their wives. Neither those of age to govern, nor ordinary Mandarins, with great authority, and while not in command over them, offer reverence to their wives.

It is also a certain and established matter in the Orient that anyone who takes a degree of Bachelor of Arts or higher, immediately their house, their character, their garden becomes exempt from paying any kind of land tax; and this grace is extended also to foreigners, when they deserve it, or through particular friendship, as was done for us in the two cities of Beijing and Nanjing.

Also in China, many lands are given by the Kings of Men to some individuals, continuing through inheritance without paying tax, nor any other obligation.

Burial plots, as in Nanjing and Beijing, are very much commanded by the King. They do not pay any tax. In effect, if the King in these years grants areas where there are houses and gardens, suitable for burial, to wealthy merchants, and even if the priests should desire it, they would not be removed. Rather, the Mandarins would conform with new provisions, leaving brothers, nephews, and nieces in possession of them, without paying tax.

Someone might say that no one can divide what the King can do, and grant these graces to whomever he wishes without being obliged to do so. From where then do we know this particular grace of the King? All the members pay taxes, and the common ordinary person pays them, from which it follows that the King is the true lord of all of China.

I respond well, without prejudice to anyone, and I would say that in China no one was lord of a single palm of land without paying taxes to the King. This is a manifest deception; for in the southern Vice-royalty there are many who are lords of their lands without paying tax.

As for what is said of ordinary people paying tax to their neighbours, both internal and foreign, they commonly have external jurisdiction. To the King they pay this tax, but it is the true lords of the lands who receive it, and these pay taxes; nor would they pay it to the King.

Primarily, because in their true vineyards of Dallas, for hours on end, they would walk and create good [outcomes] for the King, with the King's command. The King endured, then promptly departed, leaving behind pledges to the King, in the company of these individuals, as well as with the counsel of the nobility, such as in Lisbon, Counts, Dukes, to the Limnero [chronicler]. Wheat and chaff, defend the henhouse, and hear beloved [subjects], such as the Dukes of Braganza, and true lords, giving honour. This decree, or tone, sits now as a thorn, even for seven years of iron. Nor for this reason should one infer that the commands are not carried out, and in important matters, up to 17110, ladies without having eaten grain from their lands, their weapons, and their Dukes. Confirm this matter, with the consumption of food, and when someone is summoned, bury them or send them away.

Second Point.

Secondly, thus, the King of China, in particular lord of the land of Malacca, commits, beyond what is said in Portugal, and if God spares [him], to cast out a Negro on Saturday the 27th, and the aforementioned commands have no power in this land of Timur. He will make known the command concerning this matter, as well as concerning the union, when, in order that they might adapt themselves, and in our possession of them, and in their restoration.

They arrived at Deodores and entered this land of Mosa, namely Malha, where they weighed goods. These weights, in the form of peltry, formed the declared currency of this land.

They claim that this land belonged to the King of China, whose name is Jorge, and that the King confirmed it. They first contracted by braças and established a trading post at Sorliqueny with Oring, an inhabitant of Sanchoas, in 1555. Then, in 1555, they moved to Macas and established a port there for trade. As they had known the inhabitants for years as merchants, they admitted them to the commerce of Canhas. Fernão Pires being appointed governor by the King of China and favoured by the King of the City, granted land and a site for the city, where the services of Sophiquesy were performed. A famous standard was erected there, which annoyed the ancient inhabitants of this city and they sought to destroy it, as affirmed by the old residents. With this, they brought the Portuguese to this land of Canhas. The Mandarins, great lords, gave each one a gold plate with an inscription for this purpose; and in this way, many plates, which the great merchants gave to the city on various occasions, were collected.

It is obligatory that they pay tribute to the King. At the end of the sixteenth century, Dominica I, Lord of these lands, gave this city to the King. Each year, he pays a tribute of five hundred sasis of land to the King. The Torhiquery, consequently, make known the antiquity and solemnity of the customs and laws. If anyone wishes to know more, the King has assigned this port, in addition to the rights pertaining to the Portuguese, under the jurisdiction and authority of the governors. Certain payments were made for some years to the King's treasurers, because the Portuguese handed it over to the authorities, for their principal governor consumed and wasted it. Therefore, as protector of this land, he consumed it.

Mana's application to Alfas Ceduri regarding the opening of Ro Amnd Deflenka. The Marquis of Seville, Splendour of El Jorde Vencido of Tornecho, for the Marquisate and jurisdiction of Milan, writes that some villages, such as Alley, served De Equabaga. With whom here we make the following agreement: Aihil, as he was called, suffered great prejudice. He sought redress because his estates were seized and held for El Detaylun Pem Burgey, who was responsible for the expenses and payments for this matter. He further states that he suffered great hardship and prejudice in this affair, and this is the truth.

Balboa is among the prisoners in Mandany, and the Marquisate of this land is under the King of Portugal. His sons are very seriously ill, and he cannot govern or administer this land to defend the nation as he used to in any past month or year. He requests the privilege of the sea route to Judo and Pdu from some king in Portugal, and they will offer him galley service and desire his favour. Such is the state of affairs that there is no remedy, except for a swift agreement with the city. The city says: "See, I request this agreement for your benefit."

The King of Zhire, son of Mandanes, gave this man and For[ja] firstly, neither the King nor [his] subjects. He responds firstly [that] Mandarens built this City of Porbequery, then, wanting to leave it, they gave it to us, our ancestors, and we took possession of it.

He also says that concerning the iron sheets, since they use them to build houses, they should first ask for permission to live in a separate place; whoever gives permission [to live] in a separate place, and to define boundaries (which they call forum) of their lords or the buildings, it is clear that they should ask the lords to define [them]. He spoke of the Mandarins' authority. He said he was going to build houses, and the Mandarins stopped him, saying that he had to observe the laws and customs of the place, which the Vendors would show him. These are the laws to live perpetually in that place, and by observing them, they would live perpetually in that place; and by observing them, they would want to live there, and if they did not want to observe them, they would go against their laws, and they would commit great injustices; and this, and similar iron sheets, serve as confirmation of the legal possession that the princes gave them.

He also confirms this gift, exposed in several public pronouncements, by order of the Mandarins who govern this Province. The first was in the time of Dom Diogo Marcondes, when he gave a passionate plea in a memorial to the King against the Portuguese, persuading him that the Canarese were outside of this jurisdiction and that the King should do them justice. The Canarese, he deposed, having seen the King's justice, gave him many gifts. The council, after much deliberation, examining the matter, responded that not only was it not good to expel them from Perbeguery, but rather they deserved favours, since they had done much service to His Highness. With this resolution, they were even more emboldened to build and settle, understanding the King to approve (by the opinion of the Mandarins). This resolution was in the year 1617, in the month of January, according to another memorial sent from Nankin to the King in the same month of December. In reply to another memorial, from another great Mandarin, after examination thereof, the King responded in this manner.

On the 12th, having received a memorial through an informant and subsequently a cross-referenced memorial, the King, informed of the fabricated accusations of arrows shot at the Cathedral against the Portuguese of Macau, convened a similar assembly of all the Mandarins and governors, and the representatives appointed to the King. They were reluctant to appear without fear of being expelled. However, there was no cause for their expulsion. Instead, a great injustice was done to the Macanese who were married to native Chinese women in this city, and had children, grandchildren, and burial plots, etc., and were expelled. Could they return and live here? The matter was examined in the War Tribunal, which seemingly agreed with the King but took no action. However, the King clearly approved the opinion of the Councillor, who should see the truth of this matter here.

If it is true, they will be convinced of the truth. Therefore, what is the issue? If a man sells his garden and fig tree, and then someone else sells some small plots, and then the garden and fig tree are sold again, and men with green clubs come to the place, and there is fighting, and even those who formerly agreed with the King are beaten, but I can say that not even a palm's width of this land will be truthfully acknowledged as belonging to the King. But if it decays, and you truthfully and conscientiously assure that you will defend what you have bought, taking and accepting it, with the intention of returning to your houses, and if it is ordinary practice, and you lend publicly, and then it decays, and is lost, this is also decay, as is evident from the cases of those who, being in possession of various lands, do not sell them, even in great need, where there is justice, and we sell the lands of those who sold them.

The King and the Prince have no true dominion over this city, because if a married man commits some crime for which the laws confiscate the property, and then they confiscate the property of those who are established here by the Portuguese, there will be no place where the Portuguese can enjoy the honours of their ministries and justice; you will have to enter within our court.

The city, undoubtedly aiming to flatter, beseeches certain individuals, knowing that these depositions are in the master's, the Portuguese King's, possession, and trusting in his understanding of this matter, to retain their cattle. If they wish to understand this clearly, they should consent to the King's ministers. It does not appear to belong to private proprietors. It is evident, therefore, that the King of Portugal and his city have held dominion for as many years as the riches they have been able to extract from it, and have begun to extinguish the tribute previously paid. Those who have come there, fearing the Mandarin and the battle, for their lord and master, have brought the Crusade to their lands and places, always sending it to this land, and sending it to other cities that are not located there. It is worthy of consideration to give the city, besides being truly its own master, a piece of land, to be held in good faith by the land itself, in addition to the five hundred the King already has.

He does not wish to diminish the lands of the King, because we can say what he wants not only by word of mouth, but also in writing, as is clearly evident in the way many cities are governed. He does not deny that the city is not his.

The first [reason] is to fortify it with bulwarks and artillery, which is not against the Mandarins, since they openly say that they can ask Manila for assistance. If it were against the King, they would ask Manila for assistance, and they would send them experts and equipment to defend the city from the Mandarins. And if the governors had been diligent, they would have fortified the city because it was necessary.

The second reason is that they are dying of hunger, and for this reason they ask the King, since the city is not his, and they ask him because they want to treat him as someone who defends the city, sending them soldiers for their defence.

Leaving aside other considerations, I ask this question: If the Mandarins want to take away the Portuguese, who are few against many, and they defend the city, since it is the King of China's and he has dominion over it, just as he would do wrong in expelling them, so would the Portuguese do wrong in defending it. It also seems that they would be punished. You would not...

The Greek merchants held grievances against the King of Portugal. They surrendered to the Viceroy of China, who summoned them to court and unjustly sought to expel them. Therefore, these unwarranted and inappropriate disputes will cause war outside the city of the King of China.

Following the German mandate in Norfeuer, they commanded in Portuguese that they should make ten maces and then land at Moitras debulle, where they would sow discord. Whether this is rumour or truth, one should always judge the matter. All truths should be spoken at all times, especially when they can be defended. Therefore, they should restore arquebuses and promise suitable lengths to convenient ends and worse. But if no harm is done to anyone, they should not leave the city for any reason. Nor should they argue the mandate to expel the Portuguese. Thus, their lordship and their age. For these and other major injustices in the world, particularly among the Gentiles, they act in the world.

Nor is it to build ordinary houses. This land belongs to the King of China, and we sometimes want it. Because not everyone understands it outside of it, nor is obligated to it. Also, it is necessary to observe our just laws. These matters mean that the King of China effectively owns the land, having the power without showing it, except when necessary, and then showing it moderately. But this is fear and dread, because when it comes to this in city councils, the two sides agree and disagree twice.

Third Point:

That in the city, in December, they ordered the Portuguese to be expelled from this land. Because the city was obligated to maintain good conduct, wherever it may be, they should repair houses anew, especially those of the committee.

Alsinador of the City of Nagasaki diligently sought personal gain without scruple. This profiteer devised five strategies to harm the Portuguese in this city, taking advantage of the great respect and deference shown to mandarins. First, he aimed to enslave Chinese people by purchasing and selling them outside the region. This was done openly, with ships frequently departing this city for other ports, laden with boys and girls. He also intended to seize Japanese people and transport them elsewhere, as those residing here were few in number. He believed that those on the coast should not remain here, and that ships and other remedies were necessary to assist the Portuguese and defend them against the Chinese. His enemies, however, felt that the Japanese should be embarked and taken to Japan with all speed, lest they fall into the hands of the Chinese.

His second strategy involved purchasing all available sulphur, preventing anyone else from acquiring it. With this, he planned to construct new houses within the city, thereby gradually expanding it. He believed that the more the city expanded, the more enemies would appear to threaten the Chinese, forcing them to remain within their kingdom due to this great threat. He likened this to a well-armed knight. He also intended to seize the ships' artillery, preventing them from being transported elsewhere fully armed. He envisioned the mandarins becoming emboldened by this and expelling the Portuguese, believing that the more numerous and powerful a ship, the less likely it is to be permitted entry. He saw this as a significant threat, and feared that the mandarins would expel the Portuguese, thereby gaining control of the world.

His third strategy was to accuse the Portuguese of being unnaturalized and unworthy of residing in this city, thereby causing discord and leading to their expulsion. However, this promise was not kept. The unrest in the city, caused by the Chinese desire for war and wealth, stemmed from these and other, more serious matters.

Driven by an ardent zeal for the Praça (Plaza), constantly pressured to demonstrate loyalty in the service of the Altars, but dismissed according to article 322. He was instructed to diligently maintain both the history and the Mass, ensuring they remained steadfastly observed in the same location. He expressed great affection for the entity that governs the city, domesticating the new arrivals. He claimed never to have served in any other capacity, and they refused further discussion. When they arrived at the specified location, he requested the removal of two individuals. They had vehemently accused him, he asserted, of dwelling in a house with spices, both near and far. However, they failed in their attempt to discredit him. He maintained his composure when they accused him of betrayal without foundation. He confidently addressed the council, speaking with Joseph, whose forces numbered seventeen thousand soldiers, about discovering a city and achieving a state of unity. He spoke of cities and towns, vast plains, and routes both by sea and land, traversing rugged terrains. They reportedly spoke not a single word, but communicated solely through gestures, due to their disfigured and monstrous appearance. The execution of the aforementioned cause was impeded by the absence of suitable messengers. He expressed fear, similar to Dante's, but at a different hour. They were to be guided by an island, due to its great size and convenient location. This was to occur within five centuries.

Fourth Point in Chapters.

Fourth Chapter, Of Protest. It states as follows: Regarding what we now witness in these lands, we declare, protest, and in accordance with the law, we will not obey, nor even listen to things that, for the second time, despite the edict, which for the second time comes from the King of Spain, author of this deposition, cause any harm or disturbance to this City and its inhabitants; nor to the merchants who are present, whom we wish to treat as Your Highness desires, because this trade is for the preservation of these holy places, often by His Majesty, without prejudice, and with the profit and utility that results from it, given the offered profit and utility of the trade from India, and wherever it may be profitable, as often as possible; whence, when it is necessary to fulfil everything concerning this matter, to the detriment of this City and the preservation of trade, it will occur.

The fourth premise that arises on this point is the necessity of having everything in this City, by its own authority and in accordance with it, be able to govern and dispose of matters, confessing in authentic, legal documents, and not by the lords of the City, and subsequently, neither equal nor present viceroys. The same feeling. May it please you to preach and write in favour, promising reasons, and sign the same. May it please you to allow us to appear and be well received in the higher courts, for now and without prejudice to the matter.

Secondly. This City is not new, and not in China, but enters into this business of the green banner, not as a minister of the King of China, and executor of his commands.

They may say that as protectors of trade, and at times when... But this... It will be worth it; because we have been here for many years, having immediately come...

When seeking assistance, company, or support, the Mandary people of Viram summon others who respond and convene with them. Should any conflict arise with the city, they invariably appeal to the Religious Protector, a constant presence within their order. The effectiveness of this appeal, coupled with the city of Viram's involvement, is notable. From Mandary Val Moura, regarding the affront to their customs, we received reports that were sent to Nortern, stating that you intended to seize Da Jilia Uha Vas Nogego without justification, to deliver it to those who will undoubtedly praise it greatly. This is akin to disturbing the peace, and there is no one to intervene in these actions. Therefore, I implore you to consider the consequences. Another significant issue concerns the Mexicas, whom you transport from here to Acumetha, to the Chinas. A rumour circulates that someone is inciting those who are well-disposed towards us to disrupt the company. They come adorned with flowers, yet their intentions are unclear. This concerns a certain prominent individual near Jagunar. Whatever you desire from him, let it be known. Trushf Papuy, along with Reguar and Farum, and also Ed Pamenary and Nuba of Mandary, may perhaps provide insight and experience. However, after much deliberation and counsel, the matter remains unresolved. Like overturned benches, the situation remains precarious.

Item, an order to the mandarins, either by achieving ease of access or by seizing Portuguese individuals: if they resist in São Nicolau, Vezolucas, and henceforth in Nés, Rivas, Mufrem, and Mochassem, Vezolucas, the mandarins are authorised to rebuild. By resolution of the 27th of Mosha Vinvenia, everything is to be rebuilt, but they are not to be compelled to allegiance. Memorandum: Resistance will occur several times, and they will be held accountable wherever they are requested with authority.

Year of 1622.

Letter from Father Nicolao Eryphardo to Father Visitor Gabriel de Mattos.

Pax Christi.

With the letter from Father Triguau of Canha, I received [your letter] together on the 1st of August 1622, and with them the charitable act which for so many years I have requested, of assigning me this burden so disproportionate to my merits: for all of which I give many thanks to God, especially for His greater glory. Father João da Rocha, my successor, cannot immediately attend to this church, as he has no one to whom he can entrust [his current responsibilities].

Second point:

Residence in Rio de Janeiro, yes. But now he will go there in October. Gaspar Berxeira, as the Reverend Father ordered, assuming he can come to Macau by the end of June. Upon arriving, he will immediately deliver the account of 18, with the other mission papers.

Regarding the points of difficulty, he did not respond. But as he is burdened ex officio by his successor, he will offer a detailed response. Meanwhile, if you raise three or four issues, he will be pleased to address them.

Act of employment: since then, he made a statement of intent on our behalf, which stated that the incoming December, he had given Dados and Mascarenhas authority, but there was fear of some fabricated rumour. But he was leaving things ready, and Madam was already appearing, and determined to leave at any hour, or to continue with the said enterprise.

The second point of Brother Luis Termandy, who was ill, and now dead. Nothing from him yet. It has yet to be ascertained if the two boxes he had, but the time to buy the silk, and then order it from Eugen, were found on the way. Of these things, he informed the visiting Father. When he left, he only had Thomas in Rio de Janeiro; he had already dismissed the others. By the grace of God, he took his leave, but not without the greatest difficulty in departing on this voyage. But this time he let himself be deceived by her, and undoubtedly God will lose them.

To spend some time wandering. Having, moreover, to compose, it seemed more appropriate to make another part of it; partly to have enlightenment on the present object, and partly to remove the opportunity for those who wanted to enter within. To serve the Brothers.

The third point to note here, it appears, is that he should assist Father Eugen in the government. This seems difficult, and to say: with good reason they fear the Governor today, and they fear him, because he is the Procurator, as well as, but rather because he can act as Minister at the time that...

This Supreme Superior portrays this matter. It was fitting to dismiss the same [individual] from the office of Standard Bearer, for the greater benefit of the aforementioned. This resolution is very good, and he is recovering his vineyard; and he is recovering mine; and [it is necessary] to deliver these offices to him immediately. Also (when there is any of such things outside), in this, after the sale of Norway, the Supreme Superior could not ordain the lesser benefice outside of any of these. In this, after the sale of Norway, the Supreme Superior gave this to Manchester. Also (when there is), the matter will come to fruition. This, with the quota of Cyprus.

The state of affairs is the same, and it is necessary to write about the trifles to Bantam and Macao. From Friesland and Bantam, and much more, I am hindered by the abundance of diverse mandarins offering themselves. But now, with you, the rest of the language... would that we had more to fill all the requirements of the phone. The matter of the second column is separate.

Because of the Colaos in October, this is very propitious in favour of all things, and sometimes they have large batteries of 20 pieces. These things, if from Xian, are advancing to confront the adversary, to be seen. But always with little motion, perhaps by chance. But so that Norway may see me being today in the mountains, little for us, in the end, on our side, I have eaten much. I have little to tell you. May it all be for the benefit of His Majesty, and so that he may deign to protect us.

From Amsterdam, September 1st, 1983. From someone complaining. We will adopt Zeus, our God, much more. He has designed Macao; but for this reason, he was establishing himself there. Thus, we also sent a mandarin against him. Perhaps much of this is because of the coffee. At any rate, but to the Chinese, the first Haltão, a man, creator of the Portuguese, saw through them, and they did much against him, such grave insults to his natural state. He is Portuguese, and they fear the true name of Tutes (Cayman St.), and that the heavens respond when they call them by their true names. They feel great fear of the mandarins.

They are so numerous in Entaqui, and because they are the Viceroy's people, they act with impunity against others. Among other matters from this region, which I now write to Your Grace at the insistence of other honourable Portuguese gentlemen, Mr. Maver Eduardo and Mr. Bach, particularly regarding the General, given that the Mandarins of these areas behave as they do in Cork, so that Vi Cotes reported to Mr. Parcido Mendes that Miguel de Macas and Inacio Dellas gave them Minguel one day, seemingly to act against the Kingdom. And without doubt, there will be much basis for these complaints, the Chinese being considered treacherous and well-supplied. It is good to know the reason and how it happened, including any faults and negligence that may have occurred.

Mr. [name unclear] also made it known regarding the water, grains, and firewood, ordering the opening of the warehouses and raising that infamous stone against the honour of the Portuguese. Therefore, I could describe the grievances, and Mr. [name unclear] denies our grace of Zemné in their favour, in order to bring the Portuguese to trial. You saw, Your Excellency, the generosity of Mr. Morahans to the King of China, offering free lodging, and the hostility of Mr. [name unclear], which he already sent through the corners and other defenders. And this Mandarin, Tien Sun Paulo, who defends the existence of these same grievances, and petitions Your Grace with Dr. Dotoras del Macas, who wishes to send people to reclaim the island and rebuild their houses. In a joint consultation, the aforementioned and Mr. Paulo, together with Mr. Miguel, gave ample demonstration of being honourable gentlemen, worthy of enjoying that place with dignity, as well as the Vicar and the Bishop of the College.

From [place unclear] they went in procession, as was desired, and others were provided with Mantim and other things to make ironworks with greater ease. No one pointed to this favour from the aforementioned, who failed here regarding the aforementioned matters. [Unclear phrase: "cruel Deociles e esguim vequarerada, Man de bene de acor agente has ingenua, e Mais das boas menta"].

Mortality in China is high. It is now the time when the sons of deceased mandarins submit their petitions to the Chaynen and Chitas, as best suits them, along with Sam Paulo, Affonso, Illiquel, and Father Afonso.

No more is offered at this time. Therefore, I conclude, in the Holy Sacrifices of endorsements, Kanchi, 26 April 2622.

Your Majesty's servant in Christ, Nicolao Gongobardo.

Your Reverence should not fail to make a note in the Companion's volume regarding the effects (ports) after the coura effect has occurred. Affonso Jankoni imagines that we are already providing clothing by order of Del Buy. But given the extent of our current adversities, it was necessary to dissimulate with the other Companions, as we are currently doing. However, this dissimulation should not prevent us from opposing Danthoni, against whom, as Master Miguel clearly tells me, he has particular grievances and resentment. Both he and the other Christians always advise me thus, and as long as the matter remains unresolved, but speak of the aforementioned Father's intervention, have patience if you wish well for our mission, as you certainly do. In the meantime, assist from there by providing for necessities and other things that may be beneficial to this Christian charity.

aforementioned justice system, which will proceed against the persons who commit such offences. Dated April 15th, 1622. Governor Barreto. Simão Cunha.

Copy of the Provision:

Fernão de Albuquerque and Council, Chief Captain and Governor of India, make it known to the aforementioned Alvarez of the City of Macao and its jurisdiction, and in accordance with the opinion of the magistrate and dispatch, I see fit that the Fathers of the Society of Jesus in China shall not lack provisions on the Green Island. Maintain this provision in the same manner as last year, with the resident and converted Chinese. Should anyone attempt to act contrary to the secular and ecclesiastical courts, the captains of said city shall give full support to the aforementioned justice system, which will proceed against the persons who commit such offences, and the magistrate, and all other justices.

Justices, officials, and all those to whom this applies are hereby ordered to uphold and fully enforce this decree and all its contents, without question or impediment. This decree shall be valid as a formally issued writ in the name of the King, registered in Book 4 by João de Souza in Cangim on 18 April 1622. The Sovereign, António Rodrigues de Guevara, has expressed his will in this matter.

Note: This decree mandates the issuance of a writ to each magistrate at a cost of 5 [units unspecified]. The magistrates of China have neither registered nor included any [information unspecified], but it remains in the state it was after being issued in that manner, without being registered by Afonso Rodrigues de Guevara in Register Book 5, pages 79 and 114, and Book 6. [Signed] João de Souza, Master of the Office. João de Souza, who, as a member of [unclear - possibly "Azaues"], [unclear - possibly "Geronimo Pinto"], [unclear - possibly "defonceer"], and [unclear - possibly "egestade Nachtar"], recorded this in Book 4, page 234. [Signed] Mateus Rangel.

I, Dr. Salo R. [unclear - possibly "Deguerente"], Chief Clerk of the Municipal Chamber of this City of Macau, certify the aforementioned petitions from China, and that "Della" [likely referring to a person] has been faithful to the verbatim content of her petitions. In the name of this individual, [unclear - possibly "Gel hoz"] acted in Goa, as one of the Governors who, as a member of the said petitions, was present in the Registry Office of this City. At their request, I have examined and verified these petitions today, 20 September 1623.

[Signed] [unclear - possibly "Dige Gel. De Rege"]

Dom Francisco Gardin, lawyer and overseas Judge of His Majesty's City of Macau, having seen the aforementioned petitions, requests their inclusion in the records to finalise the matters contained within this inquiry. This inquiry pertains to the aforementioned provision.

On the ninth day of November in the year 1620, within the chamber of this city of the Name of God in China, the aldermen and councillors, having assembled, discussed the following matter. Confirmed news had arrived of the Dutch and English intending to attack this city and establish a settlement. Letters from the Factor of Japan, along with reports from religious figures, detailed the enemy ships from the East Indies. The central question was whether the citizenry currently residing in this city should remain or depart. Given the importance to the entire state of resisting the Dutch and English enemy, the councillors stated that, for many justifiable reasons, it was the duty of all to remain and defend the land. Everyone, without exception, should be present in this city to oppose the aforementioned Dutch and English. It seemed likely, considering the manner and disadvantages described by the captains, that the enemy ships from the Indies would remain here. Therefore, the captains' opinion was that the local ships should stay and confront the enemy. Three pilots, having sufficient experience, agreed with the captains' assessment. Despite this consensus, considering that the enemy ships might bypass this city and proceed to Macao, where they would encounter fewer obstacles, it was decided to comply with the orders of His Excellency the Governor and other officials. The local ships would remain here, prepared to engage any enemy vessels arriving from Japan or elsewhere. Should the enemy attack, they would be met with resistance. Given the importance of this matter, it was concluded that the garrison should not be reduced, and the Captain-Major and Auditor should execute these orders. The aforementioned appointed commissioners, along with Ensign Cabral and members of the chamber, agreed that the citizenry should remain here despite the aforementioned disadvantages, as there were no reliable reports of the enemy's advance.

In the year 1622, expenditure on walls and a hook, loads, and the like amounted to 14,000,000. From 1638 to 1650, expenses totalled 2,065,553. Expenditure amounted to 1,633,240. From 1685 onwards, expenses amounted to 2,297,000. From 1685 to 31 July 1745, expenses, including those related to procurement, totalled 17,995,793.

This account, dated 16 March to 17 June 1745, does not include the costs of the Moços' food and clothing, nor the costs of the hired Moços, nor childbirth expenses with Gomás. It only includes an error regarding the Moços: a monthly expenditure of 4.87 cater, in May of some years. Furthermore, expenses exceeding 14,000 arose in some years, as can be seen in the first Vesprita.

In 1524, rebuilding the houses and two mills belonging to the city incurred costs for the carai, as declared in separate papers. All the income comes from Macte pones. The man who is there sells chickens at three cond. each, and ducklings, and pigs at five cond. each.

From this place, he buys fish and food for the Moços. For this purpose, the mars Jude comes from Colle. He also buys hoes and other tools for the farm. The ship does not suffice for everything. From this Colle, they only bring fruit when there is some. The fruit is sold in the city, and some is kept. Colle, since 1724, sells some produce annually, but often the income does not cover the expenses. This declaration is made here because I do not have another copy. Alecao, 17 June 1745.

Annual Letter of 1621 from this College of Macao.

We, the Marquis of [ILLEGIBLE], in this [context] greatly commend the customs, but we are much troubled by them. See above, Most Illustrious Lord, the work. You will find that this College has lacked this year. Praiseworthy.

As there was much work in this College recently, they gave up the Japanese and Chinese languages, because they are forced to use their own language. And those who continuously deal with and write in it, for this reason, have made little progress in the study of this Order. I was assigned to Ilha Verde last year. Why did we build a house on the [UNCLEAR: Ilha/Island], which is so important? In the midst of such studies and work, it was already generally formed, and the diligence and care of its good fruit was being felt, when the enemy of humankind, understanding that we were arming ourselves against him, in order to wage war with the help of divine grace, stirred up the Chinese against us with such fury, and robbed us. More than this, they even wanted to destroy us. They wanted to set fire to the city of Vermelho, belonging to this College. We, not with offensive and defensive weapons, but with tricks and diabolical inventions, expelled them from the land. And it is good to mention this incident, because while the situation in China is good, good occasions arise for them to carry out their intentions. Thus, they sent a Mandarin to this city with an order to our governors that they should demolish the houses that we had built on Ilha Verde, and that they should seize our workers, goods, merchandise, and money. And they came with an order to Ilha Verde, where we had built and where the workshops were, and they seized our workers and put them in prison. The city's governors understood these responses and could not help the fathers because they could not do anything.

Serem Religiosos aided legal experts, not in this matter. Because of imitating them, they would have to demolish and burn the houses. To resolve the matter and enact their prohibition against these poor people, officials from the city of Nanjing arrived, demanding from Simon Leander the tribute we were preparing. Justice officials, unable to withstand the clamour, returned the tribute so that the houses in which they lived could remain. Never had the Christians, for fifteen years, been so troubled. Nor were we spared by avoiding the evils of persecution. Seeing the agreement to demolish the houses coming to nothing, they began learning the language, with such feeling from all of us as cannot be explained.

This trouble was great, both because of the loss of the houses (had they stayed on the island where they fished) and also because of the expense of bringing supplies, which cost us little when we were content to stay on the island. Once, when the mandarins returned, we abandoned everything and cut down the island's trees. However, as we already had Portuguese men in Macau, everything was settled. And we cut down the island's trees. However, as we already had Portuguese men in Macau, the city was established and there was no longer any danger. It was easier to resist there. They were satisfied with placing a stone with their characters, where they prohibited, by order of the King of China, that houses be rebuilt in that place without a licence. But as time passed, we now have some small houses with the consent of the mandarins, and the island is more secure. The island has never been so populated until now.

We neither expected nor could imagine. In December of Fumeiro, A.^o Dham confessed his terrible Memorial against the accused.
